

JHSSA DESCRIPTIVE LEVEL RECORD

TITLE: Chevra Kadisha of Calgary fonds

No.: CKC

DATE RANGE: 1904-2014

EXTENT: 14cm of textual records

ADMINISTRATIVE HISTORY:

The Chevra Kadisha, literally the Holy Society, is Calgary's Jewish burial society, and the Jewish community's oldest organization. It is a not-for-profit society that continues the age-old Jewish tradition of burying the dead with dignity and proper ritual according to Jewish law; the guiding principle is respect for the deceased.

Until 1904 there was no provision for Jewish burials in Calgary, and bodies had to be sent to Winnipeg for interment. The death of infant Goldie Bell in 1904 prompted community leaders to buy a small cemetery site south of the city limits on 'Cemetery Hill', in what became the community of Erlton. The Chevra Kadisha of Calgary was incorporated in 1907 under the aegis of the Congregation House of Jacob. It received its charter on December 4, 1914, with Charles Malkin as president. Elijah Geffen and Jacob Woolfe served after Malkin, who held the office again from 1922-1953, after which he became Honorary President. Other presidents included David A. Dvorkin (1953-1963 and 1964-1966), William Polsky (1963-1964), Harry Goresht (1967-1968), Percy Fishman (1968 -1974), Julius (Ziggy) Bleviss (1974-1994) and William Aizanman (1994-2017) and Louis Bracey (2017-).

Over the decades the Chevra Kadisha has conducted several thousand burials, in association with the firm of McInnis & Holloway, serving the Jews of Calgary as well as those living in rural areas and smaller communities throughout southern Alberta. When Jewish visitors have died in the area, including several World War II service personnel killed during training exercises, Chevra Kadisha has arranged proper care and -- when appropriate -- transportation of their remains.

The work of the Chevra Kadisha is performed almost exclusively by dedicated volunteers, including an active women's auxiliary, who serve on behalf of the society, sewing burial shrouds, performing tahara (preparation of the deceased), arranging memorial services and supervising burials.

Chevra Kadisha established a new Jewish cemetery site in the south end of the city in 2005, including a funeral chapel to replace the 17th Ave SW chapel and mortuary, which had been built in 1961.
