News from the early Jewish communities of southern Alberta was included, in English, in the Montreal-based Canadian Jewish Times as early as 1905, and in the Yiddish-language Israelite Press [Dos Yiddishe Vot] from around 1912. The first Jewish newspaper based in Calgary, The Canadian Western Jewish Times, lasted a single issue in 1914.

Winnipeg's Jewish Post, and later the Western Jewish News, carried regular reports from Calgary correspondents, but it wasn't until the early 1940s that Calgary had its own publication, The Jewish Community Centre Bulletin. Beginning in 1960, southern Alberta news was part of Alberta Jewish Chronicle, and in 1962, the Calgary Jewish Community Council began publishing the Calgary Jewish News, which continued monthly until 1985. The Jewish Star commenced a ten-year run of bi-weekly publication in 1980. Its closure in 1990 was closely followed by the establishment of Jewish Free Press, which was sold in December 2019 to the publishers of the Edmonton Jewish News, who began publishing Alberta Jewish News which included news from both Edmonton and Calgary.

SCOPE AND CONTENT:

The collection consists of issues (some photocopies, date of copying unknown) of The Canadian Western Jewish Times, The Jewish Community Centre Bulletin, Alberta Jewish Chronicle, Calgary Jewish News, The Jewish Star, and Jewish Free Press.
